METRO ASKS ALL EMPLOYEES TO RETURN TO WORK TODAY
Police Manhunt Ends Safely

DENVER, Sept. 6 — The police chase that shut down a portion of Interstate 270 for five hours has ended, and Metro Wastewater Reclamation District officials are asking all employees to return to work as scheduled.

“Police told us no unauthorized people got onto our property during the incident,” said Metro Security Officer Len Carson.

The manhunt near Metro’s property at 6450 York Street ended about 7:15 a.m. today after police captured two car-theft suspects.

“Treatment operations ran smoothly during the incident,” said Treatment Superintendent Steve Walker.

During the incident, security officers turned away employees who were arriving for work at the main gate. The employee recall began about 7:15 a.m. when the manhunt ended.
